The Water Bonds Issued by the City of Jackson

ARE SAID TO BE WORTHLESS

And the Purchasers Decline to Accept Them -- Death of a Pioneer -- Accidents and Incidents of a Day in Brief.

Jacason, Mich., Jan. 18 .- Considerable discursion was aroused here today over the announcement that the city water bonds had been declared to be myalid. It having been intimated that Adams, Blodget & Co. refrained from taking the bonds because their reprecentative placed the bid too high, and the intimation being called to the attention of Meaers. Spencer, Trank & Co., they have written a letter in which they explain that the real reason of their non-acceptance was their illegalcharter. It is understood that an attempt will be made by the council to award the bonds to another party, which may possibly accept them upon the belief that Jackson will never repudiate its debts, and that all obligations the city incurs will be promptly settled. Although the majority of our citizens might stand ready to pay for the bonds, yet, if they are illegal, those who chose to do so might refuse to pay tares, and if they were illegally levied they could not be collected and the city might, and doubtless would, become involved in a tangle which would cause some expensive litigation. ity, under the provisions of the city

John W. Marner Passes Peaceably Away Last Evening.

GRAND HAVEN, Jan. 18 .- John W. Barns, one of our best known and highly-respected citizens, died at his home in the Fourth ward at 7 o'clock last evening, after a short illness with influenza. Mr. Barns was born in Stowe, Vt., April 10, 1823. His father, Jacob Barns, moved to Grand Rapids with his family in 1836. In the spring of 1845 John W. and his brother James moved to this city, where they have since resided. In 1851 Mr. Barns and Wm. N. Angeli embarked in the newspaper business, publishing the Grand River Times, the tirst number being dated July 2 of that year, and the office of publication in Griffin's building. of publication in Griffin's building. ARTIFICIAL IVORY.

Another of the Triumphs of Science Manufacture Described. Natural ivery is composed of tribasic hosphate of lime, magnesia, alumina. relatine, albumen and calcium carbonate. Many attempts have been made to make an artificial substitute, but until recently they have proved unsuccessful. The process, says the Chicago Herald, is, briefly, to treat quicklime with sufficient water to convert it to a hydrate, adding to it, however, just before it becomes completely hydrated, an aqueous solution of phosphoric acid, and while thoroughly stirring incorporating small quantities of calcium carbonate, magnesia and alumina, and finally the gelatine and albumen dissolved in water. Thus is obtained a plastic, intimately mixed mass, which is set aside to allow ompletion of the action of the phos phorie acid upon the chalk. A day later, while the mixture is still plastic. it is pressed into the desired form and dried in a current of air about 150 degrees C., and after being kept for three or four weeks becomes perfectly hard. The proportions, which can be colored by the addition of suitable substances, are: Quicklime, 100 parts; water, 500 parts; phosphoric acid solution (1.05 specific gravity), 75 parts; calcium carbonate, 16 parts; magnesia, 1 to 2 parts; alumina precipitated, 5 parts; gelatine, 15 parts.
